

HIGHWAYS The Right Way II →

Breaking
Ground

NEW TRAINING FILM!

It is predicted that 221,000 vacancies will be created in the energy and utilities sector by 2025. With new people entering the sector, there is a continuing need to enhance basic behaviours, skills and awareness, ensuring the health and safety of both workers and the general public.

In partnership with sector employers, Energy & Utility Skills has produced a suite of training films covering risk assessment and safe digging at street works. Funded through the Construction Industry Training Board's (CITB) Flexible & Structured Fund, the aim of the film is to improve the awareness, safety and skills of the workforce.

Breaking Ground is the latest edition to the 'Highways the Right Way' suite of effective and high quality training films. The films can be utilised to support a range of training across the provision for Highways operatives, including:

- Refresher training for experienced workers e.g. Toolbox Talks sessions
- Induction training for new employees
- A complimentary resource to incorporate within more formal internal training programmes
- One-to-one or group coaching sessions
- Awareness/ familiarisation training for office based support staff

The suite of films is available on our YouTube channel. You can also get in touch to request free offline copies of the films.

Click play
to watch

Watch the new film now at go.euskills.co.uk/breakingground
If you require an offline copy, please email communications@euskills.co.uk with your company name and details of your training course.